Dear Hiring Manager,

I am thrilled to apply for the Industrial Engineering Intern role at FHP Manufacturing, a position that feels like a perfect confluence of my academic pursuits and eagerness to contribute innovative solutions, in a field that vividly captivates my interest.

At my university in Miami, I have applied theoretical concepts through vivid project simulations and internships, yielding tangible improvements to designs that delighted my professors while igniting my curiosity even further about operational efficiency.

Recently, I designed a manufacturing layout for a simulated facility; this effort improved workflow efficiency by an impressive 20%, an accomplishment birthed from late nights of precise planning mingled with comprehensive analysis of time studies that provided me enlightening insights.

Having worked collaboratively on projects and value stream mapping, I found joy in working alongside various peers, sharing ideas with vibrant discussions filled with enthusiasm, where every team member's contribution shaped our outcome.

As I strive for my degree, I continuously seek opportunities to grasp both practical knowledge and innovative techniques, especially within environments that thrive on creativity and problem-solving, evidenced by my commitment to reducing waste through actionable recommendations.

Thank you for considering my application.

Sincerely,

Ryan Harris
