STRENGTHS

- 📁 Evidence Organization
Chronological files made complex benefit records easier to review, and supervisors could trace each conclusion back to source material.
- ✍️ Investigative Writing
Clear summaries separated allegations, facts, and open questions. That distinction kept simulated referrals focused and defensible.
- ⚖️ Ethical Analysis
Testing alternative explanations became a useful habit during capstone work, reducing confirmation bias before findings were reached.
- ♥️ Program Integrity
Research connected recurring fraud indicators with control improvements, giving faculty a practical view of prevention and review.
- 🛠️ Field Readiness
Route planning and observation exercises built confidence handling sensitive materials during regional assignments and supervised casework.

SUMMARY

Early career criminal justice graduate with supervised experience supporting public assistance fraud investigations, regulatory casework, evidence review, investigative writing, and program integrity analysis. County practicum work involved food assistance, cash assistance, Medicaid, and child care scenarios involving recipients, providers, and vendors. Built chronological case files from applications, transaction histories, correspondence, and supporting records, then separated allegations from verified facts and unresolved questions. Prepared mock referrals addressing restitution, repayment, program disqualification, administrative review, and possible prosecution. Research work examined fraud, waste, abuse, improper payments, embezzlement, security threats, and control weaknesses. Clear communication, confidentiality practices, interview fundamentals, field observation, route planning, and ethical judgment support dependable investigative service across regional assignments.

Public Program Integrity Research Assistant, University Research Lab

University Research Lab 📅 September 2025 - May 2026 📍 Traverse City, Michigan

Conducted supervised research on public program integrity, classifying indicators across benefit scenarios and translating recurring findings into practical control recommendations. Protected sensitive simulations while presenting source based conclusions through concise investigative writing and evidence matrices.

- Classified fraud, waste, abuse, and administrative error indicators across anonymized benefit program scenarios
- Built evidence matrices linking allegations, source records, corroborating facts, and open questions for consistent evaluation
- Analyzed recipient, provider, and vendor cases involving food, cash, Medicaid, and child care benefits
- Authored a research brief connecting recurring investigative findings with practical program integrity recommendations
- Presented findings to faculty using concise investigative writing and source based reasoning
- Followed confidentiality and secure file procedures for sensitive simulations involving regulated investigative information

Criminal Justice Fraud Investigation Capstone Researcher, Capstone Project

Capstone Project 📅 January 2025 - December 2025 📍 Traverse City, Michigan

Developed a supervised simulated benefits fraud investigation from initial allegation through evidence planning, interview sequencing, reporting, and referral analysis. Tested competing explanations, assessed source reliability, and presented defensible findings with control improvement recommendations.

- Designed a simulated benefits fraud investigation with an allegation, evidence plan, interview sequence, and documentation standards
- Evaluated mock financial records, applications, correspondence, and identity information to construct an evidence supported chronology
- Tested alternative explanations through corroboration and source reliability checks before reaching investigative findings
- Produced an investigative report and administrative referral explaining evidence, repayment implications, and recommended next steps
- Assessed control weaknesses exposed by scenarios and proposed earlier detection and clearer documentation processes
- Defended findings before faculty and practitioners, answering questions on ethics, confidentiality, and referral thresholds

PROJECTS

Public Assistance Evidence Matrix 📅 2026

A recurring records question became a structured evidence matrix linking allegations, source documents, corroboration, open questions, and possible administrative outcomes across public benefit scenarios.

Improper Payment Control Review 📅 2025

Research into improper payment indicators connected case findings with practical program integrity recommendations for clearer records, earlier detection, and stronger review decisions.
